

Jane Edmonds
Clinical Psychologist
Professional Lead
Sussex Partnership Foundation Trust

15th June 2016

OUR PROJECT

Spring Well: supporting people with learning disabilities and complex needs to have a voice in their care planning process.

NOTHING ABOUT US WITHOUT US

The person and their families and carers should be at the centre of all our work, and be supported to be actively involved.

As health care professionals we should know this!

BUT

Our paper work doesn't suggest this is the case

People have told us this isn't the case

WHY?

We think we are too busy

We don't have the right resources

If a person doesn't have capacity we think it is job done

Our scope is too narrow Transforming Care told us again we should be aiming for coproduction

(and found very few examples of it nationally)

So what did we do?

But together a project and got funding from HEEKSS

Spring Well: supporting people with learning disabilities and complex needs to have a voice in their care planning process

Thank you to everyone at HEEKSS

What is important for the project?

We work with people who use our services, carers and our staff

We give a voice to those people who aren't usually given a voice

That the project is coproduced

Our Aims:

Produce a set of standards about how we work together with people and support joint decision making

We want to produce some training for people who work for us

We want to develop the right forms and information sheets

We want to have the right easy read forms available

We want to engage better with families and carers

Plan

Employ a project coordinator

Employ a project facilitator – a person with lived experience

Employ a film maker to make some high quality training and information resources

Recruit to a series of focus groups

Change how we engage with people using our services

Look at if we improve outcomes for people

