This is a call out to all the women and non-binary/trans people of autism; to speak out, to tell your story and celebrate our unusual perspectives. We need to band together and collectively share our experience of autism spectrum to the world, to dispel stereotypes of autism that are male biased and essentialist. I was one of the lost people of autism and I don't want to feel lost anymore. This performance is about my own autobiographical experience of autism, in my own unique, quirky and creative way I explore what it means to me to be autistic and where I go from here.

* Please note this performance contains scenes of nudity
