

How can we support people with learning disabilities to think and talk about death and dying?

Richard Keagan-Bull, Amanda Cresswell & Leon Jordan

Supported by: Prof Irene Tuffrey-Wijne, Dr Andrea Bruun & Jo Giles

Have you seen our banner?

It shows you what we've done together!

A large blue banner for a toolkit. At the top left is the Kingston University London logo. The main title is 'New resources for end of life care planning with people with learning disabilities'. Below this is a section titled 'Let's talk about funerals' with an illustration of three people. To the right is a QR code and the text 'Get the toolkit &amp; info' with a URL. The banner features several illustrations: a car, a person playing guitar, a person at a desk, and a group of people. Below these are several icons representing different aspects of care planning, such as 'Cremation', 'Burial', 'Religion', 'Expressive and wellbeing', 'Get your car sorted in', and 'Who looks after you?'. In the center is a large red and black trash bin labeled 'TOOLKIT' with 'End of life care planning' written on it. Below the bin are more icons for 'My Personal Cards', 'When I'm ill cards', 'Being grateful', 'Help in the kitchen', 'Being cared for in bed', 'Washable', and 'Hospital'. At the bottom left is a 'Guide' icon and at the bottom right is a 'Talking Mats' icon.

It took many months but here is a short video...

Kingston University
London

The Victoria & Stuart Project

Let's talk about funerals

Celebration

Thank you!

The Victoria & Stuart Project
204 posts

Kingston University London

Edit profile

Twitter / X
@VicStuProject

The Victoria & Stuart Project
@VicStuProject

Involving people with learning disabilities in end-of-life care planning. Working together to develop a toolkit and resources. Led by @TuffreyWijne (NIHR202963)

victoriaandstuart.com Joined March 2022

251 Following 543 Followers

Study website

<https://www.victoriaandstuart.com/>

Dr Andrea Bruun
Research Associate
Kingston University
A.Bruun@kingston.ac.uk

Questions or comments?

